Introduce a new software for English teachers If you're an English teacher, then you know that finding time to print student's work can be a nightmare. We're constantly answering the same questions from students about what will happen if they don't hand in their work on time, and we have to constantly remind them that turning in their work late only makes things worse. In this post, we'll be telling you all about how our new Peer Assignment Manager software will make your life as an English teacher easier. It allows you to distribute papers electronically rather than having to use paper copies which can take up a lot of space and can get lost or damaged easily. As an English teacher, you don't need to worry about organizing your papers anymore! Peer Assignment Manager Software Features:

The way Peer Assignment Manager works is that once you've created the website and made the students log-in to it, then they can submit their work electronically directly to you. The student will only need the username and password to do this. And as long as you've set up a team for each unit/topic you teach, the student's paper will automatically appear on your team's section and not be assigned to anyone else. You can also assign papers yourself by selecting any of the topic headings in the Peer Assignment Manager software and use it as an assignment page. At the end of each session, you can print out all of your students' assignments, in one place. There's no need to go through all the trouble of printing everyone's work when you know that they'll hand in their assignments late. You can print it directly from Peer Assignment Manager. All you need to do is click on the 'print' icon in the software, and off you go! What's more, if your students want to print out their own work instead of having it handed back to them in class, then they can do so by clicking on the 'print' icon in their Peer Assignment Manager screen. This will send the paper to the printer, which they can then take home at their own convenience. When you're creating a Peer Assignment Manager page for a particular topic, you can then choose which students are assigned to that page. You can also choose whether or not to assign papers by date back-to-back. So if you decide to follow this option, it means that groups of assignments for one topic will be marked as done back-to-back, so once an assignment is marked complete, the next assignment in line will be marked as completed too. This is useful, because it will make your Peer Assignment Manager look very neat and tidy. Here's an example of how to create a Page for 'English Discussion' in Peer Assignment Manager. If you would like to give it a try, all you need to do is click on the 'Create Page' icon in the menu bar of Peer Assignment Manager. You can then choose 'English Discussion' as the topic heading for this page.
